Ship Building.

It will be seen by the following list, that this District still maintains its pre-eminence in the business of ship building. It is not only the great amount of tonnage annually put affoat here that we advert to will satisfaction, as evincing a high degree of enterprise and activity among our nitzens, but the art of ship building has arrived to Am Bibliotal Repository, 4 London and Williams so great a degree of perfection here, as exhibited in our beautiful ships, as safely to defy competition in any quarter. It is, therefore, we acknowl-Ed-) edge, with great pride and gratification, that we point to these specimens of the skill of our me-Long may they sustain their present-elevated position, and abund intly may they be rewarded

While adverting with so much satisfaction to the prosperity which has attended this one branch of industry, may we not be indulged in intimating a wish, that the enterprise, capital and skill of our citizens should not continue to be so exclusively directed, and that to ensure the highest degree of prosperity which the great natural advantages and resources of this legion is so eminently capable, that it is necessary to pay rather more attention to diversify the employment of our oitzens. Could a portion of the capital now existing here, be employed in extending our trade and establishing manufactures, especually those more immediately connected with navigation, it cannot be doubted that the permanent prosperity of this place would be established upon a much surer foundation
